Two found dead in cell

by Keith Robinson
The Associated Press

LUCASVILLE, Ohio -- Investigators found two more victims Thursday as they began to piece together what happened inside a cellblock held for 11 days by rebellious maximum-security prisoners.

Eighty miles away in the state capital, lawmakers cancelled a House session in honor of the victims and ordered investigations into the siege that left nine inmates and one guard dead.

Inmates at the Southern Ohio Correctional Facility surrendered Wednesday during a seven-hour, televised broadcast.

Five guards held hostage since April 11 were released as the last of the prisoners were taken to an adjacent cellblock. The guards were in stable condition Thursday at the Southern Ohio Medical Center in Portsmouth.

Prisoners had asked for media coverage as a condition of the release. Authorities and inmates also agreed to 20 other points, including a review of living and working conditions at the prison.

At afternoon briefings, prison officials said two inmates were found dead Thursday when investigators began to sift through debris in the evacuated cellblock.

Corrections spokesman Mike Lee said all inmates were accounted for. He did not know what caused the latest deaths and did not know the names of the dead inmates.

Col. Thomas Rice, superintendent of the State Highway Patrol, said there was "quite a bit of damage" in the cellblock.

"Mattresses and doors, anything you can imagine that would be in a penal institution, are all over the place," he said. Authorities had to "cut a path" to the place where the first inmate's body was found early Thursday.

Prison spokeswoman Sharron Kornegay said there were fewer inmates in the cellblock during the standoff than officials had thought. Earlier, prison officials said 450 inmates were inside. On Thursday, Kornegay said revised figures showed that 409 inmates were involved, including the inmates found dead Thursday.

She said 129 of the rebellious inmates were transferred Thursday to the Mansfield Correctional Institution, about 140 miles northeast of Lucasville, to relieve overcrowding.

A military explosives team searched the cellblock for booby traps and explosives. There was no word about whether any were found.

Ten Ohio National Guard companies remained at the prison early Thursday, but eight were expected to leave later in the day. The remaining 185 soldiers were to leave Friday, said Gen. James A. Hughes, the task force commander. During the siege, 800 soldiers were assigned to protect the prison.

Davidians say FBI started fire

by Laura Tolley
The Associated Press

WACO, Texas -- Six survivors of the inferno at the doomsday cult compound say the fire was started by an FBI tank that crushed a propane container and knocked over several lanterns, their lawyers say.

One survivor said through his lawyer that the scores of people who died in the blaze did not commit suicide, as the FBI said, but were caught in a fire that moved so fast they could not get out.

"Those people didn't have the ability to find their way out; they couldn't see to get out," said Dick Kettler, an attorney for Renos Avraam of Britain.

In Washington, Attorney General Janet Reno said today she hopes an investigation of the standoff that ended with the deaths of the cult members will help in dealing with future incidents.

"We're going to try to consult with the best experts ... on what could have been done," Reno told a Senate Appropriations subcommittee.

Cult leader David Koresh and as many as 85 followers were believed to have died Monday. The fire started after agents in armored vehicles bashed holes in the walls and pumped in tear gas.

The Justice Department says that FBI snipers outside the compound saw at least two cult members setting fires. One of the survivors told agents that as he was leaving the compound he heard someone shout "The fire's been lit, the fire's been lit," said spokesman Carl Stern in Washington.

Heat-detecting equipment in an FBI helicopter above the compound recorded hot spots in three separate locations shortly before flames began shooting out of the building, Stern said.

Students rally to confront racism

by Chris Hawley
local government reporter

About 80 people participated in a march and rally Thursday to protest racial prejudice following the federal conviction of two of the four police officers involved in the Rodney King beating.

Members of the Racism Reduction Center said they were unhappy with the verdict and urged the crowd to fight racism before it causes violence again.

"That verdict was a sellout because they don't want another riot," said Anthony Garafolo, a freshman secondary education major. "Now we've got to work together against racism -- it's up to us to get this done."

Chip Carter, a junior english education major, agreed.

"These issues have reached a crisis point," he said. "We have to step to the problem and look at it before it comes to us in a way we don't want."

Carter urged University students to confront racist remarks, listen to the complaints of people who say they are oppressed and stop ignoring racist behavior.

"If we think the problem's not here, you're wrong," he said. "Stand up and get used to [standing up]."

Carter said the center organ-

Organizers said they planned the march and rally to defuse racial tensions following the verdict in the Rodney King civil rights trial.

Pell Grant funds lowered Money unavailable for all to receive largest award

by Julie Tagliaferro administration reporter

Editor's note: This is the third story in a continuing series of stories on financial aid available to students.

Students applying for financial aid may have an easier time receiving it this year because of many changes made by the federal government in the higher education amendments.

However, although more students may now qualify for financial aid and award levels have increased for most of the federal financial aid programs, students will not necessarily receive as much funding as they may have been able to in recent years, according to Conrad McRoberts, University director of financial aid.

Students applying for the Federal Pell Grant for the 1993-94 academic year may find they will not receive as much money as they expected to, despite the fact that the maximum grant award has increased, McRoberts said.

As a result of the higher education amendments, the maximum award available in the Pell Grant program increased from $2,400 in 1992-93 to $3,700 for the 1993-94 academic year.

However, the actual maximum amount students will be able to receive for the 1993-94 academic year is $2,300 -- $100 less than last year's amount before the higher education amendments were passed, McRoberts said.

This is a result of appropriations legislation -- a bill passed by Congress to reduce the actual maximum amount of the grant after looking at the amount they have to allocate and the different federal areas needing funding, McRoberts said.

"What's going to actually happen because of the country's budget problems is that there is not enough money to fund [the Pell program] at $3,700," McRoberts said.

This change will be a problem for students because they thought they were eligible for more money than they will receive, he said.

"The problem is that people heard there was more money available, but the actual grant money available is on the downside," McRoberts said. "It is vitally important for Congress to provide grant assistance [for] students to go to school."

About 3,500 University students currently receive the pell grants McRoberts said, adding that the number will probably decrease for next year as a result of the changes.

"The Pell Grant continues to be the largest main source of federal grants to students," McRoberts said. "But unfortunately, because of the changes, the amount of the grant will continue to decrease for students."

Canadian hospitals open doors to U.S.

by Jeffrey Uibrich
The Associated Press

TORONTO -- Attention Americans: Cheap, government-subsidized health care for sale. High-quality surgery at low cost. Why pay more in Toledo when you can get it for less in Toronto?

Toronto Hospital, the largest acute-care facility in Canada, and the Hospital for Sick Children, will begin marketing their services south of the border in the next few months.

And dozens of other Canadian institutions may follow.

The plan's proponents say it will bring badly needed millions into hospitals chronically short of funds. Others feel it will mean poorer service for Canadians in favor of rich Americans.

The Ontario government, for the moment, seems to be sitting on the fence, though Health Minister Ruth Grier says she does not support aggressive marketing of services outside the province.

Nonetheless, the province has looked at the issue. A government study shows Ontario hospitals could make more than $80 million U.S. and create 645 jobs by serving Americans.

Hudson's explanation of the plan is simple.

All Ontario hospitals have excess capacity, beds closed due to funding cutbacks. By bringing in patients and money from outside, hospitals will be able to open more beds, hire back staff and, as a result, shorten waiting lists for Canadians.

Up for sale will be such high-tech services as bone marrow transplants at $80,000 each, brain tumor surgery, head and neck surgery and complicated cataract surgery.

E.A.R. to the Ground ...

This week, Earth Day was celebrated for the 23rd consecutive year.

Thanks to clear-cutting of forests, toxic incinerators, waste mismanagement and a propensity for tankers to spill oil into the water supply, there's a little less to celebrate about than there was that first Earth Day in 1970.

This isn't to say we haven't been trying.

Approximately half of all aluminum cans purchased in this country are recycled. Most of the major fast food chains have replaced their styrofoam burger containers with paper (recycled paper at that). And a recent survey taken in Chicago showed that the majority of those who don't reuse their reusables still want to and would if they knew more about drop-offs, household recycling hints, etc.

We're living on a planet where people want to do more. Now, we all have to start working harder to stop the destruction of our planet.

Using water savers, canning food, recycling, composting yard waste and working toward safer environmental practices are all ways we can stop the process now. And if you're a true environmentalist, then try your best to help your friend who doesn't feel that one more person not playing his or her part will make a difference in the long run.

Or pretty soon there won't be any Earth left to celebrate.

"I believe that this museum will touch the life of everyone who enters and leave everyone forever changed," said President Clinton as he spoke of the United States Holocaust Memorial Museum, designed to commemorate the six million Jews and five million others who died in Nazi Germany's concentration camps during World War II.

Indeed, the exhibit is powerful. The gallery is based in Washington, D.C., a city bedecked with statues and remembrances of our great national leaders, military moments and architects of United States democracy. The Holocaust Museum, however, is rich with grim images, countless photos of the deceased and roughshod wooden barracks simulating the prisoners' "living" quarters.

It's a sad, stunning contrast ... but a necessary one. Hopefully, the increasing number of people believing unfounded accusations arguing that the Holocaust is a myth can someday pay a visit to the museum and realize that such an unimaginative horror did occur.

In a world where similar atrocities are taking place -- particularly Yugoslavia -- the Holocaust Museum will serve as an educator for those who refuse to believe and a reminder for those who've forgotten. Maybe then we can avoid the mistakes of the past.

BG - A Colorful Place To Be.

That was the theme for this past weekend's events for sibs and kids, and it was also the opening line of Mike Sears' wonderful column, "Siblings share quality time" (April 20, 1993). His column, based on the perceptions of his youngest sister during her visit, was a happy, warm-fuzzy piece which made me laugh -- but also really brought out the differences between their weekend here and the one I spent with my 13-year-old sister, Allison.

Allison is in a wheelchair. She can't walk by herself, except with the aid of a walker, and that is only an option for short distances. Already you can imagine the adventures we had!

She arrived Thursday night, because I had to go home Saturday afternoon and because she didn't have school on Friday (NATO Day or Teacher In-Service Day or Good Friday -- you know, one of those trivial holidays we don't get off). So, Thursday evening, my mom drove the two hours from Strongsville to bring a very excited young woman out to see her sister at college.

I live in Rodgers where there are no ramps anywhere into the building, just several sets of those three decorative steps outside double doors. They do, to their credit, have an elevator inside, presumably for those students whose two good legs get weary trekking up four flights of stairs every day.

So, with what developed into a system over the three days, I would unload her wheelchair, carry the pieces up the stairs, assemble it at the top, get her walker out, walk with her to the steps, lend her a hand trying to use the railing to get up those three steps, help her into the chair, find someone to hold the door open while I pushed her inside (because if she did it herself, she would scrape her fingers on the doorjamb), wheel her into the elevator and carry the walker myself.

Then, inevitably, once up to the fourth floor, she would have to go to the bathroom. So I would simply wheel her down to our bathroom, over the sizable bump from carpet to tile, into one of the stalls, where she would stretch as tall as she could to reach the top of the stall, so she'd have something to hold onto ... then wheel her chair out since the door wouldn't close with it in her reach.

Friday morning presented another dilemma (I mean adventure). I have class from 10:30 to 1:30, and I try not to skip much, going on the popular maybe-if-they-see-my-face-everyday-theory.

Even though Allison is 13, I was not about to leave her alone in a building she couldn't get out of in an emergency, let alone use the bathroom.

So I sent her along with all the non-traditional students' kids at the BGSU Child Care Facility. But seriously, folks ... I managed to persuade a couple of friends to do a little babysitting. (Thanks Dave and Dan!)

She went with me later that afternoon to visit some friends in Student Services, a building with parking spots, ramps, an elevator ... but no bathrooms. It has to be all or nothing, guys; partially accessible is nothing but inaccessible to someone in a wheelchair.

Friday evening, my roomie and I took Al to Berries for dinner. Since there are no handicap parking spaces by the dorms, we parked defiantly in the loading zone (didn't even get a ticket -- lucky for them!). Then I asked the student who was loading up his car, parked in front of the curb cut, to please move, which he kindly did. Getting in and out of Chapman was fairly easy, as they have ramps and elevators.

We were late for the 8 p.m. showing of "Aladdin." We bought our tickets for the 10 p.m. show, and I made arrangements to have the elevator turned on so we could get in. We arrived at the "theatre" (210 Math Science) and took the best seat available to us -- the very top one. This room is all stairs, like most lecture halls, and unlike most movie theatres.

From our lofty vantage point, Allison spotted the black counter top and sink at the bottom of the room as well as the periodic tables posted on both walls. She turned to me, absolutely disillusioned: "I thought we were going to see 'Aladdin!'" She couldn't believe I had tricked her into coming to a chemistry class.

We returned to Rodgers around midnight, happy but exhausted (especially since the only handicap parking spots near Math Science are by the Psych Building) and parked in our own handicapped spot by the back of Rodgers. I went through the aforementioned routine in order to get her inside and got about halfway through before I remembered the back doors were locked. We depended on the kindness of others who risked getting in "Big Trouble" for letting us in the door by the elevator.

Saturday morning we got up early since it was our last day. We considered ice skating, but Al was worried about running people over in her chair on the ice, so we chucked that option. In the end, we stopped at the bookstore to pick up a few necessities (exiting via the entrance since she couldn't fit through the check-out lines) and headed on out of Bowling Green.

We did have a lot of fun, but it was an incredible amount of work, and we were subjected to very limited options. The ADA was supposed to change all this, and I haven't noticed any improvement. If this continues, next year's theme will be a snap.

That's some pretty good toad

JULIET
COOK

Now that your interest is piqued (perhaps), read on and discover a whole new world.

Cane toads are these poisonous amphibians that breed like fiends and squirt toxic fluid from a gland on the backs of their necks. Don't squeeze one too hard -- the stuff could fly in your eye, and you'd go blind.

Also in danger is basically any animal that sinks its innocent bi-cuspid into a cane toad. In this sense, cane toads are a real environmental threat, imbalancing ecosystems and all. Yet they are the most common and widespread amphibians in this hemisphere.

Cane toads were introduced into Puerto Rico in the 1920s to eat beetle grubs off sugar cane fields. When this little plan achieved success, they were shipped to Hawaii, then other cane-growing Pacific islands.

In 1935, some were packed off to Australia, even though Australia has suffered from every new species that has been introduced there. The cane toads were no exception.

Originally numbering 101, they soon multiplied into millions, resulting in a density of about 500 per acre. And they didn't stay in the cane fields -- they were all over the place, eating everything: insects, mice, pingpong balls, each other. But they are so poisonous that nothing can eat them.

This lack of natural predators, of course, leads to an unwanted excess of cane toads. So much so that Australians have been trying everything to get rid of them.

Some communities organize neighborhood toad hunts -- they collect as many as they can and then into the freezer the toads go where the cold kills them quickly and painlessly. However, the most popular method is still to run over the cane toads with your car. Then, desperate teens can collect the cane toad roadkill, crumble up the dried skin and smoke it like pot. And if there's no dead cane toads to be found, then they can always lick a live one and wait for a quick fix.

I don't know about that, though. What if you accidentally bit the thing? You would die. But I'll bet the cane toad would live on and lay 20,000 more eggs. It always seems to work that way.

USG savings card offered

by Jeni Bond
student government reporter

In an attempt to bridge University-community relations and to get discounts for students at local businesses, Undergraduate Student Government is offering a savings card, free of charge, to all students, faculty and staff, according to USG Public Relations Coordinator Chad Luckner.

The savings card includes 21 different businesses and is good until March 1994. Some of the businesses on the card include: Subway Sandwiches & Salads, McDonald's, Burlington Optical Inc., Finders Records & Tapes, Pisanello's Pizza, Shoe Sensation, Klotz Flower Farm, the Pharm, Ranch Steak & Seafood, Beijing Chinese Restaurant, Holley Lodge and Blue Ribbon Photo.

Other businesses participating are: Cycle Werks, Varsity Lanes and Putt-Putt, Pizza Chef Gourmet Pizza, Rainbow Jewelry Service, BP ProCare, Rapid Printing, Junction Bar and Grill, Randy Coe's Auto Shop, Falcon House Sporting Goods and Pills-N-Packages Pharmacy.

USG distributed the cards Thursday in the Union foyer. However, students can still pick up a card in the USG office in 405 Student Services Building if any cards are remaining. USG had over 6,000 cards to give out.

The savings card is a gesture of thanks to all those at the University, according to USG President Jason Jackson.

"It's an appreciation service from the executive branch of the student government to say 'thanks' to all the entities of the University," he said.

Sophomore Chad Moore said he is glad to see USG directly involved with students.

"It is good to see USG actually getting out there and doing something that helps students," he said.

Not only will the card benefit students, but merchants on the card will also benefit, Jackson said.

"We felt the business community would be receptive to this idea because it will enhance their businesses," he said. "We are very proud of this program."

USG has responsibilities in both the educational and living atmosphere at the University, and the savings card will improve one aspect of the living environment, Jackson said.

Ice show features various talent

by Larissa Hritsko
human diversity reporter

Ice Horizons, a skating program sponsored by State Home Savings Bank and the Bowling Green Skating Club, is returning to the University Ice Arena for its biannual program.

The show features a wide range of both amateur and professional skaters including Scott Hamilton, a Bowling Green native and 1984 Olympic gold medalist, and Peter and Kitty Carruthers, a dual skating team.

"Everyone should take advantage of the programs because it might be the last opportunity to see Scott Hamilton skate in BG, and the last time [the show was here] I heard Kitty Carruthers was thinking about retiring," said Joan Knappe, a committee member of Ice Horizons.

Furthermore, according to Knappe, Ice Horizons is considered to be the best amateur program in Northwest Ohio or even the nation.

The main purpose of Ice Horizons is to showcase the talent of skaters of all ages.

"One of our primary goals is to get kids involved and showcase their talent," Knappe said.

"The show is a very important event in all the participants' lives," said Marianne Mazur-Stewart, one of the three directors of Ice Horizons. "They sacrifice a lot of time and energy to produce a successful event."

According to Stewart, the goal of Ice Horizons is to have fun, reward the children involved with the club and show others how talented the members are on ice.

Practicing for the show took a great deal of time, and a large amount of that was devoted to costumes and scenery.

The Bowling Green Skating Club volunteers, skaters and directors come from all over Ohio including Holland, Findlay and Marion and also Plymouth, Mich.

Not only is there a wide range of people from different areas, but the members are quite diverse including Samuel Cooper, an 83-year-old skater who has skated in the show for years.

The Ice Horizons show will be featured throughout the weekend including tonight at 7:30 and tomorrow at 1:30 p.m. and 7:30 p.m.

GM Grad Program offers discounts

by Tara Stubbs
contributing writer

Graduating seniors and recent alumni can finally have something other than a degree to show for their years of hard work -- they can also receive money toward a new car or truck.

General Motors' College Grad Program offers a $500 discount on any new Chevrolet, Geo or GMC truck to a student graduating within six months or an alumnus who graduated no more than one year ago.

Although no credit history is required, Kerry Wysocki of General Motors Acceptance Corporation said not every graduate qualifies for the program, now in its ninth year.

"One other requirement is that students have no delinquent credit," she said.

If a student's credit is not acceptable for the program, he or she has two options. The first is to have parents cosign. The second is obtaining a letter from one's employer stating he or she earns enough money to make payments.

Students or alumni can either use the $500 towards purchasing the automobile or toward the Smart Lease Program. With the Smart Lease Program, cars can be leased for two to four years. The driver pays for the portion of the car used, as determined by GMAC.

Anyone interested can stop by a GMAC dealer and take a test drive. With the test drive, the student or alumnus will receive a free gift which includes a choice of a leather portfolio, electronic data bank or compact disc. To obtain the $500 gift certificate, details on the free gift and other program information, students or alumni can call 1-800-964-GRAD.

Wysocki said buyers do not need to bring the gift certificate to the dealership, but should provide a copy of the degree or a grade transcript. The dealership will contact GMAC to verify the $500 rebate will be sent.

Melanie Prebeg, a senior social work major at the University, already took advantage of the program.

"I wanted to buy a car and because of the $500 rebate, GM seemed like a great place to begin looking," Prebeg said.

Panel discusses gender inequality in classroom

by Jennifer Willis
contributing reporter

American girls are being shortchanged in school, according to a panel which included three University students.

At the American Association of University Women meeting Thursday night, members discussed the fact that schools are treating girls differently than boys.

"Just a little over a year ago, AAUW released its report 'How Schools Shortchange Girls,' " said Sharon Strand, director of the University's Writing Lab. "They found the effects of gender inequity in the schools have many ramifications."

Three of Strand's English 112 students wrote papers on gender inequality in the classroom and shared them with the group.

Kendra Cashen, a sophomore in criminal justice, said she felt she had to explain her reasons for majoring in criminal justice to most people.

"The curricula and instructional techniques in American schools tend to be tailored to white males."

Kylee Price, sophomore communications education major

"When I tell people my major, I get a wide variety of reactions, but everyone says 'Why do you want to do this? It's too dangerous for you,'" Cashen said.

Cashen also said men seem more involved in discussions than women in many of her classes at the University.

"In my political science class, we had a discussion on what would happen if women ran the world," Cashen said. "The results of this discussion, which was held mainly by males in the classroom, was that women are too emotional and not individualistic, thus unequipped to run the country."

Sophomore psychology major Kelly Grondin said she was steered toward teaching by her parents and friends.

"Because I was a woman, [I felt] I couldn't go out and find what I wanted to be," Grondin said.

Kylee Price, a sophomore communications education major, said bias toward boys in math and science was evident in her high school.

"Often times if the females in the class had any difficulty, the instructor would simply tell us to ask the boys for assistance," Price said. "The curricula and instructional techniques in American schools tend to be tailored to white males."

Grants

McRoberts said it is important that students continue to apply for the grant to find out if they are eligible for it. In addition, in order to apply for a federal loan, the student's Pell Grant eligibility must be determined, he said.

At the University, the Pell Grant is used to pay off the student's charges on his or her bursar bill, McRoberts said.

Any remaining money is given in check form to the student to cover expenses, according to Brian Paskvan, assistant director of financial aid.

Although this money does not have to go directly to pay tuition, it is intended to be used for expenses related to school or basic living expenses, Paskvan said.

But attorney Jack Zimmermann, who said he spoke Wednesday with four survivors and attorneys for two others, said all six say an armored vehicle that smashed through a wall hit the propane tank and started the fire.

"One person heard someone screaming from the area where the tank was, 'A tank has come in! There's a fire started!'" he said.

The nine who escaped left through doors or jumped out first and second-story windows. One person broke an ankle.

"They said the smoke was so black, that one of them said within seconds he couldn't see where he was," Zimmermann said. "People were trapped: the building was falling down, the damn tanks had just destroyed the structure and nobody knew where they were because the ceiling had fallen in."

Attorney Dick DeGuerin said today the four survivors he talked to told him "They couldn't get out, they were trapped. There was chaos and pandemonium at the last."

The survivors, he said, told him they did not see Koresh in the final hour.

"They think David was in his bedroom with his children," DeGuerin said. Koresh's bedroom was upstairs in the complex.

ized the rally because its members believe the verdict may have caused tension between blacks and whites.

"With the verdict coming down as it did, a lot of people don't feel it was just," he said. "We thought it was a good time to bring attention to the racist tensions on campus and defuse them."

U.N. vote on Bosnian events delays peace

by Teddie Weyr
The Associated Press

TUZLA, Bosnia-Herzegovina — Peace seemed further away than ever in Bosnia, with the United Nations accusing Muslims and Croats of resorting to wanton murder in their battle over central Bosnia and its envoy receiving a chilly welcome from Serbs in the Yugoslav capital.

The U.N. Security Council, which has repeatedly condemned Bosnian Serb aggression, voted late Wednesday to condemn the Croat-Muslim fighting.

The Council "is appalled by reports of the atrocities and killings of civilian population in pursuance of the obnoxious policy of 'ethnic cleansing,'" Council President Jamsheed K.A. Marker said in a statement given to reporters at U.N. headquarters. Marker is the ambassador of Pakistan.

U.N. observers estimated at least 250 people were killed in recent days in clashes between Muslims and Croats, who started the war as allies against the Serbs.

Col. Bob Stewart, commanding British peacekeepers on U.N. duty, told the British Broadcasting Corp. his troops witnessed "children held in the arms of their mothers and shot."

"Whole families have most certainly been killed," Stewart said.

Cedric Thornberry, deputy head of the U.N. mission in former Yugoslavia, said executions and massacres were committed by both factions.

The Bosnian civil war broke out after Muslims and Croats voted to secede from Serb-dominated Yugoslavia 14 months ago. Serbs have since captured 70 percent of Bosnia, and Muslims and Croats have periodically battled over territory.

More than 134,000 people have been killed or reported missing since the war broke out.

The Muslim-Croat battles have fractured the central region into myriad fronts, further diminishing hopes for a U.N. peace plan.

Lord Owen, one of the authors of the plan, flew into Belgrade, Yugoslavia, Wednesday to try to persuade the Serbs to accept the accord, as the Croats and Muslims have done.

About 40 war veterans and invalids gathered at Belgrade airport and turned their backs symbolically as Owen passed.

Some 100 people protested in front of the British Embassy in Belgrade, calling Owen "a war mediator instead of a peace negotiator."

Owen met with Serbian President Slobodan Milosevic, a key ally of the Bosnian Serbs. But Bosnian Serb leader Radovan Karadzic refused to talk to Owen, saying he had "nothing to discuss with a man who wants to shoot at us."

Owen recently recommended air strikes on Serb supply lines if the Bosnian Serbs continued to reject peace.

The Security Council has voted to impose tougher sanctions on Yugoslavia beginning Monday in an effort to force the federation, now composed only of Serbia and Montenegro, to stop aiding Bosnia's Serbs.

Karadzic later said he might be willing to talk with Owen, indicating he was concerned about signs that the Clinton administration and some European nations are considering air strikes on Serb forces.

"We take the threats very seriously since we know the Americans were not joking when they bombed Libya, Panama and such places," he said in a telephone interview with The Associated Press.

He also said the Serbs might drop their objections to the peace plan if the proposed provinces were redrawn to give Serbs a "compact" territory in Bosnia and Croatia.

International mediators have rejected that idea, saying it would reward Serb aggression.

Meanwhile, U.N. officials announced they had disarmed the Muslim defenders of Srebrenica and said a cease-fire was holding around the eastern town ringed by Serbs. Peacekeepers had asked for an extra three days to gather the arms, but Serb leaders demanded it be completed by the noon Wednesday.

The U.N. military commander for former Yugoslavia, Gen. Lars-Eric Wahlgren, said his troops had collected all arms from the town's defenders and he declared it demilitarized.

Pit bull owner arrested

Husband allegedly used dog as murder weapon

by Rich Harris
The Associated Press

CLEVELAND — A man was indicted Thursday for allegedly using his pit bull terrier to kill his common-law wife.

No one has ever been convicted of using a pit bull as a murder weapon, a prosecutor and a specialist in animal attacks said.

Jeffrey Mann, 36, of Cleveland, was indicted on one charge of murder. He is accused of ordering his 70-pound pit bull, Mack, to repeatedly attack Angela Kaplan, 28, on Sept. 2, 1992.

Police said subtle clues led them to doubt Mann's claim that the dog's attack was unprovoked.

"The first thing that caused me to take a second look ... was the location of the bites," said Cleveland homicide Detective Michaelene Taliano.

Kaplan suffered dozens of deep bite wounds and about 100 non-penetrating wounds on her arms. But she suffered no wounds on her neck or throat, typically one of a dog's favorite targets.

There also was evidence of a domestic dispute. The body had been moved from the couple's bedroom -- where the attack took place -- to their living room, Taliano said.

Animal behaviorist Karen Arnoff arranged a variety of experiments to determine whether Mack had been trained to attack, would attack without provocation or could be called off during an attack.

She said she could not discuss the results of the tests, since she expects to be called as a prosecution witness. But she said investigators found evidence of intent.

"We believe the dog was instigated and re-instigated and re-instigated to attack," Arnoff said. "He had let go and then reattacked. There had to be something spurring him on to reattack."

There was no telephone listing for Mann in the Cleveland directory. Taliano said Mann had agreed to surrender on Monday.

Mann is not the first person to be charged with murder in a pit bull case. A Chicago man charged in a 1987 slaying that involved both a knife and a pit bull was later acquitted.

Prosecutors in several cases have sought murder convictions against the owners of dogs involved in fatal attacks. But the owners have been acquitted or convicted of such lesser offenses, said Randall Lockwood, a vice president of the U.S. Humane Society.

Hubbard city auditor slams police car, charged with DUI

The Associated Press

HUBBARD, Ohio — A city official has been charged with drunken driving after his car allegedly slammed into the rear of a police cruiser.

Don Joshua, city auditor for Hubbard, a Youngstown suburb, was arrested last weekend. The charge against Joshua, 52, will be heard in Girard Municipal Court. No court date has been set.

Joshua, who is unopposed for re-election in the May 4 Democratic primary, was charged Saturday after his vehicle hit a police cruiser. Two officers were treated for back pain.

Attorney Ronald Rice entered a plea of innocent on behalf of Joshua, verified insurance coverage and waived the right to a speedy trial.

"I made a mistake and will pay the consequences," Joshua said. "I will face the medicine and do what I have to do."

A breath test registered Joshua's blood alcohol level at more than double the legal limit of 0.10 percent.

Applications are being accepted for all BG News summer staff positions.

No luck of Irish for Falcons

Notre Dame pitcher throws perfect game against softball team

by Mike Kazimore
sports writer

The Bowling Green softball team stepped outside of league play Wednesday to face the powerful Fighting Irish of Notre Dame.

The doubleheader was played as a make-up for their March 17 twinbill that had to be rescheduled because of the weather.

Unfortunately for the Falcons, the games might better have been forgotten as they dropped both contests by scores of 3-0 and 1-0.

BG would especially like to forget the first game as Notre Dame's freshman pitcher Terri Kobata threw a perfect game against the Falcons. In fact, the only Falcon that came close to reaching first base safely against Kobata was Rachelle Highfill.

In the bottom of the fourth inning, Highfill laced a sharply hit ground ball past the second baseman and into rightfield. However, the Irish's rightfielder came charging in, fielded the ball smoothly, and gunned down Highfill for the second out of the inning.

In the top of the fifth the Irish batters were finally able to break through for a couple of runs against Jennifer Wolf.

Jenna Knudson started the trouble with a two-out single up the middle. Then Wolf, bothered by a blister on her pitching hand, served up a meatball to Sara Hayes who promptly launched it over the leftfield fence for a two-run home run.

The Irish added an insurance run in the top of the seventh when Knudson knocked in Lisa Miller with an RBI single giving them a 3-0 lead.

With a comfortable 3-0 lead Kobata ended her perfect game in style as she struck out the last three Falcons that she faced, all on pitches that seemed to be out of the strike zone.

After the game BG head coach Jacquie Joseph was disappointed with the effort of her team. "We never really made a good effort against her," said Joseph. "Her go-to pitch is a riseball, a pitch that you just can't hit effectively. But we kept on insisting on trying to hit it, she just made us look silly out there."

In the second game, the Falcon's Lisa Mountjoy pitched about as good a game as could be expected. But, like Wolf, she too fell victim to the Falcons' punchless offense which has been shut out three straight games.

Mountjoy went the distance for BG, allowing just two base hits. Both hits came in the third inning, and neither of them were instrumental in the Irish's lone run.

Instead, Notre Dame was able to score the winning run courtesy of two BG mistakes.

Ronny Alvarez reached base safely to start the fifth when shortstop Tricia Askins' throw sailed over first baseman Julie Hudson's head. Alvarez was then sacrificed over to second, and then moved to third on a fielder's choice. With two outs, Mountjoy uncorked a wild pitch, allowing Alvarez to score the game's only run.

Unlike the first game, the Falcons had plenty of good scoring opportunities in the nightcap.

In the bottom of the fourth BG loaded up the bases with only one out, but couldn't find a way to get a runner home.

Then in the bottom of the fifth the Falcons had a runner on second with nobody out, but once again were unable to come up with a clutch base hit.

After the game Joseph was disappointed in the fact that Mountjoy had to take the loss after pitching such a good game.

"You can't ask for a better pitching performance than the one Mountjoy gave us," said Joseph. "You have to expect to score two, three, or four runs a game, but we're just not scoring any right now and it is really hurting us."

Mavs hope to escape record

The Associated Press

DALLAS -- The Dallas Mavericks best chance to escape the NBA book of infamy could be Friday night against the very beatable Minnesota Timberwolves.

It's the Mavs last home game. They close out the season on Saturday night in Houston where Dallas seldom wins.

"The clock is ticking," Mavs guard Derek Harper said. "We don't want to be in the record book with the 76ers. We have to win the 10th game."

Dallas has nine wins the same number the 1972-73 Philadelphia 76ers finished with in posting the worst record in NBA history.

Chances have come and gone for the Mavs to escape the record book. They lost in overtime last Saturday night to the Sacramento Kings. The loss left Harper sitting at midcourt for a full minute after the game contemplating the Mavs' miserable season.

"This is killing us," he said. "We've got to get this monkey off our backs."

It's been a bizarre and bad season for Dallas, which started the year by firing coach Richie Adubato.

Then owner Donald Carter got into a salary dispute with first-round draft pick Jim Jackson.

Carter signed Jackson and Adubato's replacement, Quinn Buckner, on the same day in March.

Jackson got the same amount of money he would have received had he played the entire season.

Also, Carter didn't get immediate help from Buckner, who signed a five-year deal. Buckner finished out the year as a broadcaster for NBC.

"We've got some guys on this team playing themselves out of a job next year," interim coach Gar Heard said.

Jackson has been the solid player expected of the sixth pick in the draft. His passing and scoring ability turned the Mavs into a victory threat, at least in their home games.

"Jackson has played well, considering his late start," Heard said.

"Sure, the losing hurts, but I try not to think about it," he said. "I'm a rookie and I'm still learning."

Heard tries to find the magic formula for a Mavs victory on Friday night in Reunion Arena.

The Mavs have fielded 29 different starting lineups in an effort to find the victory bell.

They will finish as the worst team in Dallas history. The expansion team in 1980 won 15 games.

Montana starts over with Chiefs

The Associated Press

KANSAS CITY, Mo. -- Joe Montana drew back his right arm and threw his first pass as a Kansas City Chief to an ex-49er.

Terence Flagler, a former San Francisco running back signed as a free agent, turned out to be Montana's first receiver as a Chief.

"I had no idea who I threw to. Did not know," Montana said. "Getting used to a different snap count, a different play calling, yeah, it felt different."

After 14 years and four Super Bowl victories with San Francisco and two weeks of hardball negotiations between the Chiefs and 49ers, Montana finally took the field Thursday.

"It really sank in," he said after his workout at Arrowhead Stadium. "It's final."

The biggest smile on the field belonged to Paul Hackett, the Chiefs' offensive coordinator and Montana's close friend as well as former quarterback coach with the 49ers.

Hackett's main job this spring is installing the split-back offense that former 49ers coach Bill Walsh designed for Montana.

Florida outlasts Atlanta 4-3

The Associated Press

MIAMI -- Catcher Benito Santiago retrieved a bouncing pitch and tagged Otis Nixon out at the plate as he tried to score the tying run with two outs in the ninth, preserving Florida's 4-3 victory over Atlanta on Thursday.

The Braves made it 4-3 on Jeff Blauser's sacrifice fly off Bryan Harvey in the ninth inning.

After a stolen base and a walk, Harvey threw a pitch in the dirt to Terry Pendleton. Santiago ran down the ball, lunged toward the plate and tagged out a sliding Nixon.

BG teams face Kent this weekend

Softball looking to end run shortage, stop losing skid

by Mike Kazimore
sports writer

After dropping a doubleheader to Notre Dame on Wednesday, the Bowling Green softball team will be looking to take out their frustrations on Kent State.

The Golden Flashes, currently in third place in the MAC at 10-4, will face the Falcons for a pair of doubleheaders that will take place on Friday and Saturday.

Bowling Green will enter the weekend trying to break out of a recent scoring drought and end their three game losing streak. During that three game span the Falcon's offense has failed to score a run, while their defense has been directly responsible for giving up two. Both of which gave the opposition a 1-0 win.

Bowling Green head coach Jacquie Joseph expressed some concern about the team's recent slide. "This three game losing streak doesn't help us going into the weekend, but maybe it will make the players realize that you have to score to win," said Joseph.

Last year, the Golden Flashes took three out of four contests from BG. That fact, coupled with the fact that Kent is right behind BG in the MAC should give the Falcons all the motivation that they need.

"Kent is right behind us in the standings, and they have an excellent program which we are aware of from last year," said Joseph. "It will be a dogfight for four straight games."

Another incentive that should have the Falcons playing at their best comes in the fact that first place Toledo will be visiting Akron. With Toledo on the road against the tough Zips of Akron the Falcons are faced with the very real possibility of coming out of the weekend in first place.

Joseph acknowledged the fact that Toledo could very easily drop a game or two to Akron, but at the same time she realized that BG can't count on the Rockets losing.

"We can't count on anybody helping us," said Joseph. It's in our hands (the MAC title), we just have to take care of business."

MID-AMERICAN CONFERENCE

Baseball to host Flashes with hopes of taking over MAC lead

by David Harpster
sports writer

The Bowling Green baseball team will be looking to solidify their place in the Mid-American Conference standings when Kent State visits Steller Field this weekend for doubleheaders on Friday and Saturday.

The Falcons go into the weekend with a 14-13-1 overall record and a 7-3 mark in the MAC, good for second place behind Central Michigan. Kent State enters the four-game set with a 9-5 record in the MAC, which puts them in fourth place, and a 20-7 record for the season.

prepared for the Golden Flashes. In games through April 21, Kent State had a microscopic team earned run average of 1.95, which led the nation. Entering this weekend, their team ERA had ballooned to 2.04.

Schmitz is aware of Kent State's outstanding pitching and knows that his hitters are going to be challenged.

"Kent has got some great arms. We are going to have to be more aggressive with runners in scoring position against them. We've worked on some concentration exercises in order to pick up our intensity in those situations," he said.

"We are going to have to be more aggressive with runners in scoring position against them. We've worked on some concentration exercises in order to pick up our intensity in those situations."

Charlotte seals playoff berth

The Associated Press

The NBA playoff race is down to one berth.

Charlotte clinched its first postseason appearance with a 119-111 victory over Milwaukee, and Atlanta also grabbed a playoff spot Wednesday night by defeating Washington 119-98.

The win by the Hornets, who joined the NBA in 1988, was extra special for Dell Curry and Muggsy Bogues, who have been with the team since it started.

"I feel great for the veterans," two-year veteran Larry Johnson said. "We call Muggsy and Dell the originals. They deserve this because they have worked their tails off."

Bogues and Curry both played for the Hornets when the first-year NBA club won just 20 games. The next season, they won only 19.

"When that last second ticked off, I wanted to keep the basketball and take it home with me," said Bogues, at 5-foot-3 the shortest player in NBA history. "We've been through everything, Dell and I. We've been here since Day One. We've experienced all the good and the bad."

Johnny Newman led six Hornets in double figures with 30 points. Alonzo Mourning had 19 points and 18 rebounds, while Johnson finished with 20 points and nine rebounds for Charlotte.

Blue Edwards scored 20 points and Todd Day 15 for Milwaukee.

Elsewhere in the NBA, it was Boston 126, Orlando 98; New York 105, New Jersey 74; Philadelphia 107, Miami 97; Cleveland 111, Indiana 95; Denver 137, Dallas 112; Utah 113, the Los Angeles Lakers 102; and Golden State 132, Sacramento 105.

Dominique Wilkins sank consecutive 3-point baskets 36 seconds apart in the third quarter to key a 13-3 run by Atlanta against the Bulls.

Wilkins paced the Hawks with 30 points, while Doug Overton had 17 points for Washington, which dressed only nine players for the game because of injuries and lost for the eighth time in nine games.

Indiana stayed one game ahead of Orlando for the final Eastern Conference spot despite its loss at home to Cleveland, which won for the 10th straight time.

Mark Price scored 20 points, while John Williams and Danny Ferry made up for the absence of injured center Brad Daugherty with 18 each for the Cavaliers, who beat the Pacers for the ninth straight time in two seasons.

Boston clinched homecourt advantage for the first playoff round and dealt a serious blow to Orlando's postseason hopes.

Six Celtics scored in double figures, led by Sherman Douglas with a season-high 24 points and Xavier McDaniel with 19. The visiting Magic were led by Shaquille O'Neal and Scott Skiles with 20 points each.

Denver had its biggest offensive showing of the season as LaPhonso Ellis and Chris Jackson scored 21 points apiece against Dallas.

Jim Jackson finished with a career-high 29 points for the Mavericks, who have two games remaining to avoid matching the worst record in NBA history. Dallas is 9-71; Philadelphia finished 9-73 in 1972-73.

Robert Pack had 20 points and a career-high 13 assists as the Nuggets, embarrassed by a 13-point loss at Dallas last week, opened an 11-2 lead.

Karl Malone led a 23-6 second-half run and finished with 31 points for Utah against visiting Los Angeles.

The Jazz trailed 79-69 with 4:43 left in the third quarter when Malone started a 12-2 run that tied the score 81-81 with 44 seconds left in the period. After Duane Cooper scored at the buzzer to put the Lakers ahead 83-81, Utah scored the next 11 points to move in front 92-83 with 9:05 to play.

Benoit Benjamin scored 17 points for the Lakers.

Reserve forward Andre Spencer scored a career-high 24 points and also had 11 rebounds and eight assists, lifting Golden State to a victory at home against Sacramento.

Tennis team to host Denison

The women's tennis team battles Denison and Akron this weekend at home. The Denison match is slated for a 3:00 p.m. time slot on Friday, while the Akron match takes place on Saturday at 1:00 p.m.

The Falcons are currently 8-9 overall. BG has failed to capture a Mid-American Conference match this season in five attempts.

Wednesday's contest with Ohio State was rained out. Last weekend, BG dropped two MAC contests to Western Michigan and Eastern Michigan. Against Western, BG was soundly defeated 7-2. However, against Eastern, the Falcons mounted an attack that fell short to the tune of a 5-4 loss.

BG coach Penny Dean believes this weekend will help the Falcons prepare for the upcoming MAC Tournament.

"The more competition we have, the better," Dean said. "We need to play more in order to get everybody playing well at the same time."

In singles action, freshman Patty Bank is 19-6 overall, freshman Julie Assenheimer is 14-8, and Kassie Hembree is 12-11 for the season. Bank and Assenheimer are both 2-3 in conference play.

In doubles action, the duo of Assenheimer and Hembree is 16-5 overall, Bank and Melissa Seely-Brown are 12-9, and Erin Bowbeer and Sarah Emdin are currently 10-10 for the year.

Lipps returns to Pittsburgh

The Associated Press

PITTSBURGH -- Free-agent wide receiver Louis Lipps signed a contract Wednesday with the Pittsburgh Steelers, rejoining the team he left last fall after contract negotiations failed.

Lipps, 30, worked out for the team Monday after asking coaches whether they had any interest in him. The Steelers did not have a receiver last year who measured up to the mark Lipps set in eight seasons with Pittsburgh. He ranks second to John Stallworth in career receptions and yards.

Musical chairs of quarterbacks

by Bob Greene
AP sports writer

KANSAS CITY, Mo.-- NFL quarterbacks continued their off-season, free-agent musical chairs routine Wednesday, with Steve Beuerlein signing with the Phoenix Cardinals and Bobby Hebert joining the Atlanta Falcons.

On Tuesday, Joe Montana, for years the NFL's premier quarterback with the San Francisco 49ers, was traded at his request to the Kansas City Chiefs.

The Cardinals, who had tried to get Montana, wasted no time in signing Beuerlein to a three-year, $7.5 million contract. A fourth-round draft choice of the Los Angeles Raiders in 1987, Beuerlein had been a backup to Troy Aikman with the Dallas Cowboys for the past two years.

"When Troy was injured, he was the guy that took the team to the playoffs and won a playoff game," said Phoenix scouting director Bob Ackles, who left Dallas to join the Cardinals nine months ago.

"I've never really considered Steve a backup quarterback, because when I watched him with the Raiders, I thought he was their best quarterback at that time," Ackles said. "And then when he came to Dallas, I thought, 'We're very fortunate to have two guys who can start in the league.'"

Hebert, the starting quarterback for New Orleans for most of the past seven seasons, reportedly rejected a two-year, $6 million offer from the Saints, who then released him.

Hebert's agent, Greg Campbell, denied that, but said the deal with Atlanta includes a $1 million signing bonus and up to $600,000 in incentives.

"A big concern for us was keeping the quarterback position a solid one," said Falcons president Taylor Smith. "With Chris Miller coming off knee surgery, we thought it was necessary that we go out and sign another quality quarterback."

The Philadelphia Eagles, who lost defensive end Reggie White, signed defensive lineman Tim Harris of the 49ers and former New York Jets defensive back Erik McMillan, a two-time Pro Bowler.

Harris, an unrestricted free agent who had 17 sacks last season, second in the league to the Eagles' Clyde Simmons, signed a three-year contract.

"We're delighted to have a football player like Tim who has been as productive as he has throughout his career," general manager Harry Gamble said. "His performance over the years certainly indicates the type of player he is. He's obviously an outstanding pass rusher who we feel will be a big help to what is already a fine defense."

McMillan, who spent five seasons with the Jets as a free safety, signed three one-year contracts with the Eagles. He was selected by the Jets in the third round of the 1988 draft and was the NFL's defensive rookie of the year.

He earned Pro Bowl invitations in 1988 and in 1989, when he led the Jets with six interceptions.

One day after obtaining Montana, Kansas City signed unrestricted free agent Danny Villa. The 6-foot-5, 305-pound offensive lineman played in all 16 games with Phoenix last season, including six at right tackle, five at center and one at left tackle.

Cincy's Dibble injured in win

The Associated Press

CINCINNATI -- Rob Dibble, who started the season with a perforated ear drum, now has a broken arm and will be out of action at least a month.

The Cincinnati Reds' stopper was put on the 15-day disabled list Thursday, and the Reds called up right-hander Milton Hill from Class AAA Indianapolis.

Dibble broke a bone in his left arm on a play at home plate in Wednesday night's 8-7 victory over the Pirates in Pittsburgh. Joe Kelly, the Reds' assistant publicity director, said x-rays showed a fracture of the ulna.

Dibble was re-evaluated Thursday by Dr. Jack Failla, the Pirates' team physician, and was fitted with a hard cast. He was expected to return to Cincinnati and will be out at least four to six weeks, Kelly said.

Dibble was 0-0 with three saves and a 7.50 ERA in six games. He was injured in the ninth inning when he applied a swipe tag on Pirates rookie Kevin Young as he tried to score from third after Dibble's pitch bounced away from catcher Joe Oliver.

Hill was expected to join the Reds in Pittsburgh. He was 0-0 with two saves and a 0.00 ERA in four appearances totaling seven innings with Indianapolis.

Injuries plague streaky Cavs

The Associated Press

CLEVELAND -- Cleveland All-Star forward Larry Nance suffered a fractured left index finger Wednesday night when the Cavaliers beat the Indiana Pacers 111-95.

Nance, 34, played 30 minutes, scored 12 points and grabbed eight rebounds. The injury apparently occurred at some point on the fourth quarter, team spokesman Bob Price said Thursday.

In 77 games this season, Nance is averaging 16.5 points and 8.7 rebounds.

Doctors at the Cleveland Clinic will check the injury again Friday. Nance will miss Cleveland's game Friday night in Boston against the Celtics, and his playing status after that is uncertain, Price said.

Cleveland closes out the regular season Sunday with a home game against the Philadelphia 76ers. The first-round of the NBA play-offs begin later in the week.

Another Cleveland All-Star player, 7-foot center Brad Daugherty, sat out the Indiana game due to tendinitis in his left knee. He was also expected to miss the Boston game.

Cavaliers spokesman Bob Price said there was nothing seriously wrong, but said it appeared an old case of tendinitis had flared briefly.

Daugherty played 34 minutes in Tuesday night's 105-81 victory over Detroit, scoring 13 points. Daugherty moved past Bingo Smith into second place on the Cavaliers' career scoring list with 9,522 points. Austin Carr is first with 10,265 points.

The 7-foot All-Star had said before and during the game that his knee was a little sore, but said there was no single aggravating incident to which he could point, Price said.

"He just decided to stay home and rest," Price said.

The Cavaliers are idle Thursday and play their last road game of the season Friday in Boston.

Volume six, Issue Thirteen

by Dave Baskind
The Incredible College of Musical Knowledge

As usual, we gotta lotta stuff to do this week. So, let's rapidly begin with this week's quiz. Sorry, but, as the end of the semester is upon us, there are no prizes to be offered this week. We wind up the semester by asking a 'Z' question. Besides "Legs," what was ZZ Top's only other Top 10 song since 1980? Answer at the end. This week's winner, Rachel Wamimont, whose favorite school year memories included Eve Plumb's visit and the snow day, knew that Van Halen's two Top 10 hits since Sammy Hagar's arrival have been "Why Can't This Be Love" and "When It's Love." Nice work, Rachel. She nabs a Carly Cheena's pizza and a Finders cassette.

As it's toward the end of the school year, now seems like an ideal time to reflect upon the past three years here at "Dr. Dave's Incredible College of Musical Knowledge." In that time we've had more than 100 winners and hundreds of participants, or students, if you will. The largest number of entrants ever in one week was 124. That happened last fall for one of the big decade-review quizzes. Probably the most unusual entry I ever received was from two ladies who entered the 1990-1991 big quiz. They offered not only to share their prizes with me if they won, but also offered to bear my children. Mini-Dr. Daves? What would my ma say? Not to mention my girlfriend.

I've written approximately 100 columns and I'm proud to say that in that time I've only made two errors in regard to quiz questions. One involved saying that a song reached No. 1 when it only peaked in the Top 5 and the other involved shortchanging Eddie Rabbitt's number of Top 10 hits a few weeks ago (for the record, he had 3 in the 1980s). For shame.

And so you wonder, "What's a typical Dr. Dave winner like? What makes him or her tick?" I've pondered that myself during many a solitary moment. Thus, each week I ask readers to reveal a little something about themselves. And, this is what I've learned. The average Dr. Dave winner prefers Pisanello's pizza and Prince concerts, Calvin & Hobbes and Jeopardy, Terminator 2 and Tombstone frozen pizza.

My winners had crushes on Cheryl Ladd, laughed most to Robin Williams, listed toe-cracking as their pet peeve and had fathers who actually turned the car around on a trip to Florida. Dr. Dave winners enjoy chocolate chip ice cream, Boston cream pie, Young MC, Mike Brady, Pepsi, Frazier on Cheers, Regarding Henry and Eddie Van Halen. They enjoy riding the Corkscrew (now there's a good sexual metaphor), believe that a sonic boom affected BG, list "Stayin' Alive" as their favorite disco tune and Andy Gibb's "Love Is Thicker Than Water" as their first 45, claim Steven King's The Dead is their favorite book, dress up as the Invisible Man and bruise their feet while drinking. Ironically enough, many of these apply to me, too.

Muchas gracias to all readers who have permitted me to delve into their lives. Let's delve again next week. ZZ Top's other Top 10 hit was "Sleeping Bag." As summer's approaching, this quote from my grandfather seems appropriate: The only problem with a vacation is that you have to take yourself along, too. You won't be forgotten, Poppy.

What could be worth the wait?

'Proposal' is not decent

by David Huffman
Insider film critic

"The Year of the Woman" continues to be the most misogynistic year in recent memory as far as movies are concerned. Indecent Proposal can now join the company of such films as The Temp and The Crush as Hollywood continues to make women little more than set decorations.

Indecent Proposal is the film that the whole country is talking about, a fact that should point out how bored Americans must be and how desperately they need conversation topics. David and Diana Murphy, played by Demi Moore and Woody Harrelson, are in financial trouble and go to Las Vegas to hopefully win the money they need to keep their dream house. Just when they're luck runs out, John Gage (Robert Redford) shows up flashing millions of dollars in their faces. When Gage offers David a million dollars to sleep with Diana, the young couple's life together is temporarily thrown off track.

Indecent Proposal is a big mess of the movie littered with continuity errors, uninteresting people and a sloppy screenplay that promises a lot and delivers nothing.

For anyone who ever reads Premiere's Gaffe Squad, Indecent Proposal's casino scenes are laced with editing mistakes that have various poker chips bouncing back and forth between Moore and Redford. Every movie has continuity problems, though, these are just very noticeable and point out the lack of care the filmmakers took when making the film.

In order for the story to have any kind of impact on its audience, the characters need to be people they can empathize with and care about. However, thanks to uniformly boring performances, I never felt the least bit interested in the lives of those on the screen. Harrelson substitutes acting with pounding on things, and Redford appears to be just thinking of his paycheck as he grins his way through every scene rather than convey any kind of depth. Moore is actually the best thing in the movie, but due to the passivity of her character she is just as dull as her male co-stars.

The movie opens with a voice-over by David which is little more than a string of melodramatic clichés ("I thought Diana and I would always be together"). Then immediately goes into one by Diana, who will continue to narrate the story from time to time. The script doesn't seem to know who is telling the story exactly and causes the film to be maddening.

Director Adrian Lyne deserves most of the blame for Indecent Proposal, an obvious attempt to recapture the success of his Fatal Attraction. Lyne's stilted attempts at style throughout the film, most notably in the Las Vegas scenes, only point out how flat the rest of his film is. Lyne also tries to make his film erotic, but doesn't seem to know what is really sexy. Is rolling around in $20 bills in his underwear the kind of thing that turns Lyne on?

A lot of people are going to see this film because it's the hot topic of late. After seeing it, though, I'm sure that very few will want to ever mention it again.

Indecent Proposal is showing at the Woodland Mall Cinemark 5.

'EW' film critic shares insights

by David Huffman
Insider film critic

Owen Gleiberman

Everyone knows who Siskel and Ebert are. They pop up on all of the talk shows bantering back and forth calling one another "baldy" and "fatso." They've also been able to condense film criticism down to a science so that with one quick turning of a thumb, each can summarize a film's quality without ever having to explain themselves in detail.

For those of us who like to know more about why a film is good or bad, there are the major print critics like Peter Travers, Vincent Canby and Owen Gleiberman. The latter of these men recently paid a visit to the University to discuss his career as a film critic and lend his insights into the film industry as he spoke at the Gish Film Theater.

Gleiberman is the lead film critic for one of the hottest magazines in the country, Entertainment Weekly. Every week he reviews and grades the latest Hollywood releases doing his best to shield the consumer from all of the advertising hype of a film to judge a movie's quality. To all of those who didn't listen to the resounding "D-" he gave Cop and a Half, they got what they deserved.

Having to sit through films like Cop and a Half is perhaps the greatest drawback to being the critic for an entertainment magazine.

"It's my job to see all of the [Hollywood] films," Gleiberman said.

Due to the nature of his magazine, Gleiberman can't hide behind any pretensions, as if certain films aren't worth reviewing.

This isn't to imply that Gleiberman has any closet pretensions, however. He is not a film elitist singing the praises of European "art" films. Gleiberman was unashamedly pro-American during his speech, defending his opinion that A Few Good Men truly was one of the best films of last year.

Unlike many film critics, Gleiberman has not always been a film fanatic. It was not until he was at the University of Michigan that he discovered his love of the movies. Robert Altman's brilliant 1975 motion picture, Nashville, is credited by the critic as the film that set his standard during college and remains his favorite movie.

Gleiberman also differs from a lot of his peers in that he enjoys going against the grain. Dances With Wolves and Unforgiven both won Best Picture and were praised by most critics, but Gleiberman was not among them. Although his opinions may be in the minority at times, Gleiberman always seems to have valid points and is able to express them well. A fact that is clear in his writing as well as in his speaking.

Quench stress with 'Cool-Aid'

ROCK GOSSIP FROM THE BLACK SWAMP

by Dorian Halkovich
Insider staff writer

As the final weeks of the spring semester go by, thoughts of all the work piled up on our desks can dampen anyone's spirits. But hey, two reasons exist why these last weeks should be faced with a smile.

For one, this hellish, slavish existence we've been trapped in will soon be a faded memory. And two, there's still time to party it up with friends and take part in some general hang-time.

WBGU-FM and WFAL-AM encourage everyone to come out and hang with them during the Second Annual Local Music festival, "Cool-Aid." The festival features a diverse lineup of local acts, including Derek Wolfgram, Charlotte's Webb, PogeyBait, Tom Gorman, Sweaty Whiskers, Dirt Cherries, Scapegoat, Gone Daddy Finch, Ton and the Black Minds of Music.

According to Todd Downerd from WFAL-AM, the acts will cover the musical spectrum of everything from rap, alternative and acoustic to good ol' rock-n-roll.

"We tried to put some acoustic acts in between electric acts to make the transition easier," he said.

Some may remember last year's festival, which featured many of the same bands but also had a political theme. Last year's theme, a "celebration for education," helped raise awareness of the budget crisis that ultimately affects all students. This year, the focus is on the musicians themselves.

"The reason that we're doing this is basically to raise awareness about what great, original music we have," explained Toby Klinger, general manager of WBGU-FM. "With the demise of Good Tymes, we wanted to give the bands somewhere to play."

The show is meant to be a "stress reliever" for the students, and it will give the musicians some well-deserved exposure. Downerd suggests that people bring picnics, frisbees, or even a volleyball net to make the festival more fun.

"I hope we get a sort of Woodstock atmosphere, so to speak," he said. "Just have a bunch of people out socializing and having a good time."

"Cool-Aid" is slated for Sunday, April 25 outside the Student Services Building. In the event of rain, it will be rescheduled for Thursday, April 29.

So come out and have a good time. After all, college life isn't supposed to be all work and no play.

Insane Jane Each Finger Atlantic Records

You know, it's not very often that a piece of music shocks me. But this one, friends, really goes in a direction I'm not willing to follow. Insane Jane, a suburban Atlanta, Ga. band is really, really unique to say the least.

Insane Jane is comprised of Tom Branch on guitars and backing vocals, Tim Campion on drums, Dave Roth (no, not David Lee Roth) on bass guitar and backing vocals, and Yello, a fiery female vocalist on lyrics and lead vocals.

The title, Each Finger, doesn't lend itself to much interest but after one or two hearings, you may pick up on the sexual reference. The first song, "Daisy," tells the story of a promiscuous woman who masturbates in front of a crowd, leaves for home, and gets raped. Nice stuff, huh? She (Yello, I presume) asks the question, "Is this a game?" I should hope not! Moving on, "Father Time" has an excellent, driving beat to it. "Lollipop Grenade" is as weird as the title, and "3-D Jesus" (American Standard) clearly depicts the notion that someone isn't very happy with the Catholic church. After all, comparing Jesus with David Duke isn't usually very well received.

After listening, I could've sworn that this was a Concrete Blonde take-off band, but further reading into the cover credits Blonde with some good help. Don't get me wrong, this really is good stuff. It has all the makings of a great porn-core band. And a friend of mine tells me (he's seen them live) that Yello has a bipolar disorder, and she's, well, nuts!

—Ross Weitzner

Blues Traveler
Save His Soul
A&M Records
Blues Traveler's latest offering, Save His Soul, is a brilliant album.

Thankfully, the band hasn't changed much since their last album Travelers and Thieves, but for some reason I took a quick liking to this album. They've always been fantastic, but it takes awhile to fully appreciate the talent.

The songs on Save His Soul are more structured, but the live sound is still intact. The last two albums tended to be long jam sessions divided into a few similar sounding tunes. But don't worry, the group's jam-oriented rock/blues style is at its best.

Front man John Poppers hasn't blown out his lips yet with his lightning-fast harmonica playing, and the guitars sound fuller and stronger. The lyrics may not reach the heights of their once orphan band Spin Doctors, but the musical talent of Blues Traveler is simply incredible. They are at their best on the faster tunes such as "NY Prophesie" and "Love and Greed," but surprisingly the record company chose the ballad "Conquer Me" for the first but hopefully not last single. Blues Traveler plans on an extended tour for the album, but what else would you expect from these road veterans? It is HIGHLY recommended you see this band live to appreciate what a live performance is all about.

Various Artists Funky Stuff Mercury Records

Hey, groovy! It's another seventies-revisitation disc! Dig out those purple velure bell-bottoms, grab some James-Brown-Genes-Simmons-like platform shoes, put some big, gold medallions on that hairy chest of yours and let's do the bump!

This Funky Stuff mix is funk at it's finest, and it's just in time for the seventies craze that seems to be taking over like the Silver Platters at a talent contest. That's right folks, just perfect when you get that night fever and its time to burn baby burn. On the dance floor, that is.

Those hunks Kool and the Gang, Ohio Players and Parliament perform just a few of the selections compiled on this disc. The songs may not be too familiar, but they're just as colorful as the ones you know by heart. Funky Stuff offers a variety of rhythms, as Con Funk Shun's "Chase Me" and The Bar Key's "Too Hot to Stop" are sure to get you on your feet and moving your hips, and a slower version of Leon Haywood's "I Want A Do Something Freaky To You" gives you time to grab a drink and catch your breath. Altogether, it's what is expected from a seventies mix — songs from the seventies — but they're an awful lot of fun.

Fans can get Clinton Victory Card

by Courtney B. Gangemi
Insider staff writer

Anyone not a Clinton-Gore fan may want to look the other way.

A Chattanooga, Tenn., company is offering a free full-color limited-edition Victory Card to those who request it.

The press card features President Bill Clinton and first lady Hillary Rodham Clinton on the front, with the back establishing how each of the 50 states voted.

Nothing like this was ever done for President Bush or past presidents, so why all of a sudden is there a victory trading card? Can Clinton have emerged with a mass following?

Lewis Revels, president of the National Card Company, said he believes this is something to mark a historic occasion.

"Parents and grandparents will want to make sure that their children and grandchildren get one of these free cards," Revels said. "[The card] makes a nice collectible for children and adults alike."

Even if you don't exactly care for the new president, this is a token that will aid your memory in years to come.

ROCK GOSSIP FROM THE BLACK SWAMP

The band has played over 30 shows including venues in Chicago, New York City, Philadelphia, Indianapolis and Washington D.C. The Cheese's last record hit the College Media Journal's Top 150 Radio Airplay chart and received critical acclaim from such industry luminaries as ner" cards will be randomly inserted. These winner cards can be redeemed for free political memorabilia, ranging from inauguration coins and real campaign buttons to 1989 congressional gold coins.

The Clinton-Gore team is popular among Americans, and Tennessee is just one state that is taking advantage of the vice president being from the area to make a few extra bucks. Send that envelope!

Alternative Press, The New York Review of Records, Pop Culture Press and Reflex.

The Cheese's new CD e.p. was produced by Fort Apache's Joe Harvard (Breeders, Dinosaur Jr., Pixies, Sebadoh) and finds lead singer Ike screaming about domestic servitude, STD's, The Laughing Cow and Jeremy. It's a record bound to shake the industry — and a few hands along the way. The record was serviced nationally to radio and press on April 7.

Opening the show will be Charlotte's Webb, whose new cassette is being released this weekend and will be available at Madhatter Music Co. Also, making their Howard's debut will be Introverts 9, a new band rumored to be a powerful newcomer to the local scene.

Out of the rumblings of post-industrial Detroit comes the clear-eyed and unabashedly emotional music of Red C, Saturday at EasyStreet. Recent winners of the Metro Times/Detroit Monthly Music

Awards for Best Country Band and Best Country Vocalist, Red C follows a tradition of drawing heavily on rock's country roots.

From the soaring passion of Sue Calloway's voice to the muscular sensuality of Tim Diaz' guitar to the Neil Young-like sensibility of Steve Wood, anchored by the solid foundation of bassist Joe Lambert and drummer Brian Farraby, Red C is a new act in town that you'll definitely want to check out. Tomorrow at EasyStreet. Don't miss 'em.

Fact Line: masters of the obscure

by Curt Conrad
Insider staff writer

Four hours before the 50-page geology science project is due, you realize there's a problem. You forgot to include what type of rock the Jerome Library steps are made of. After gathering the chemicals and paraphernalia necessary to run a rock identification analysis on the steps, a friend suggests an easier alternative. Why not make the call to Campus Fact Line? You're desperate. You make the call. The answer is granite.

The Campus Fact Line has been in the business of answering questions since the spring semester of 1971. Originally, the service was established as a means of rumor control during a period of turbulent student activism over the Vietnam War. It was a nervous time, and the Fact Line provided legitimate information to gossip-weary students.

Later, Fact Line received calls with routine questions such as phone numbers for pizza places and movie theatres. That development made it clear that it was time for Fact Line to expand. Hence, the mission of the Campus Fact Line, according to its director, Gardner McLean: "Fact Line is part of a student survival kit, to help students get through college."

With this mission in mind, Fact Line acquired books, files, newspaper clippings, computers and other materials to expand its information base. (It even has a book of nursery rhymes.) The service now receives -- on average -- 700 to 900 calls a day.

"If we don't have the information on hand, we will take additional steps to find it and call you back," McLean explained.

This usually involves some library research, a few phone calls, or in one instance, a long distance call to Great Britain, McLean added.

It is not uncommon for people to call the Fact Line from other countries. According to McLean, Fact Line has fielded calls from Europe, Brazil and Japan -- among others.

"One time, an alumnus called us from Korea. He had a meeting in 15 minutes and needed quick information about the gross national product," McLean said. "We found what he wanted."

Of course, employees of the service do get their share of stupid questions. Hypothetically, let's say it's 11 p.m. on a Thursday. According to McLean, if Fact Line gets a call from someone with slurred speech and loud music in the background, asking "How many craters are in a golf ball?" the service will not try very hard to find an answer.

However, if that same question comes in on a Monday afternoon, asked by someone who sounds halfway coherent, then Fact Line will do everything in its power to find the information.

Even though Fact Line prides itself on being able to find any information, it is possible sometimes to stump them. This brings up an interesting rumor that can be heard around campus. It has been heard that if a caller can manage to come up with a question that Fact Line doesn't have the answer to, they will be the fortunate recipients of a T-shirt. According to McLean, there is no truth to that rumor.

The BG News offices? No this secretive little cove is where the Campus Fact Line is located.

Insider/Jason Kamykowski

"No, you do not get a T-shirt if you can stump Fact Line," he said.

Essentially, Fact Line is "students talking to students." So how does one get hired to work on the Campus Fact Line -- which, by the way, is one of the highest-paying jobs on campus. (Before you get too excited, Fact Line pays 30 to 40 cents above the minimum wage.) There is a four-step hiring process for employment at the Fact Line.

A potential employee's performance is evaluated on the basis of two tests and two interviews. Typically, approximately 120 students apply for the job each semester, McLean said. Only six are hired. Before actually working, the new employees are trained in research techniques and use of the Fact Line information system for about two months.

So then we come to the big question. Maybe you're curious to know where the Fact Line office is located? I could tell you, but I'd have to kill you. There are two reasons for the extreme secrecy, according to McLean. First, Fact Line cannot handle a multitude of walk-in questions. The other reason is for the safety of the Fact Line employees, who often work very late hours. You can try to bribe me for the location, but I'll never tell.

Now, friendly Insider reader, I would like to share with you, my very own Fact Line anecdote. It goes a little something like this...

One night I found myself lying awake, pondering universal questions. What is the meaning of life? Is Dolly Parton human? Who created Spam and why? My petty brain had no chance of providing the valuable insight I needed to answer my questions. As I resigned myself to another sleepless night of confusion, a thought entered my head. I rejoiced. My problems were solved. My befuddlement would end. I would simply call Fact Line.

My fingers hastily dialed the number. I trembled with anticipation as I tried to get through. "Hello," said a familiar female voice. Wait, I dialed my girlfriend's number by mistake. "Hello," she said again. I was about to answer but I heard a guy's voice in the background, pleading with her to finish his message. It sounded a little like my best friend, Dick. I sat stunned, as I heard my girlfriend make little giggle sounds and hang up the phone.

My mind raced with the question, "Why is my girlfriend giving a message to Dick?!" One hope. One chance left. Fact Line. Carefully, I dialed 372-2445. It rang once, twice, thr...

"Hello, Fact Line," said a voice on the other end.

"Why is my girlfriend giving a message to Dick?" I blurted out.

"One moment," I heard him punching keys on a computer. "What's your Social Security number, please?"

I gave it to him. This was taking way too long. I listened as he whispered to someone, then more key punching. A moment later I heard him return to the phone.

"Okay, your girlfriend is giving a message to Dick because you have been too busy to spend quality time with her," he replied. It all became so clear. Of course, not enough quality time.

I couldn't help but ask, "How did you find this out?"

The Fact Line person responded: "It was quite simple. I used your Soc. number to find your name and major. I assessed your schedule and found the name of another student in several of your classes. I called him and asked for the name of your girlfriend. I looked up her phone number, called her and asked her the same question you asked me."

I could only respond with an "Oh."

Suddenly, I became aware of the incredible power harnessed within the Bowling Green State University Fact Line.

"Is there anything else?" the Fact Line person asked.

"Yeah," I said. "Do you know anything about Spam?"

Fact Line employees have access to a multitude of books and other resources to help answer your questions.

Insider/Jason Kamykowski

From the editors...

Well folks we're getting down near the end of the semester and all of the sudden we have a whole collection of students who want to be pen pals with us. It seems with last week's official Insider response to Mark Formanns (the gentleman who happened to be upset with April 9th's Hash Bash coverage) we happened to offend another one of the fine students that B.G.S.U. has to offer. Let us all take a look...

Dearest BG News Editors/Freaks,

I can see how people might want to close their minds and not wish to speak their thoughts, because a bunch of little kids with big presses go around bullying those not of the elite "press." I'd like to see all your future yellow journalistic stories truly labeled as "tongue in cheek" as you so aptly described over the phone. How nice of you to warn us with a week's delay. I'm sorry that maybe some of us "Freaks" forgot how to use our Extra Sensory Powers before ever picking up The BG News. I guess it just goes to show you can't believe what you read. Even though that corresponds to myself, at least I know I'm not selling myself off to the public as a journalist with an attitude, an opinion, the means to print it up, and no pride to even back it with a name. Funny how journalistic truth can still be such an oxymoron.

Jonathan Claydon

P.S. You can keep your Insider Magazine Editor job all to your holy self, because you've never ever spelled one thing wrong for me to witness, so I shall ever bow at your wayside (or your turbulence for being such good gossipers).

—From the little kids with big presses, bullying, future yellow journalists with attitudes and opinions, and prideless Editors/Freaks of Insider Magazine. Have a good week!

Woodland Mall Cinema #5
1234 N. Main Street
P.O. Box 49
Bowling Green, Ohio 43402

Hey kids, we're back with the quiz for one more week so get your entry blanks in for your last chance at winning TWO free movie passes for any flick of your choice at Woodland Mall Cinemas. Also, congratulations to all of last week's winners, but we won't mention any names because they're pretty much all the same.

Those lucky folks though did win two movie passes from the generous people over at Cinemark's Woodland Mall Cinemas #5. If you have the answers to our questions for this week, you could join them in the winner's circle. But don't delay. This is your last chance to get in on the winning for the semester.

Woodland Mall Cinemas is the only place in town that offers the fabulous low matinee price of $3 for any first-run movie of your choice. Or if you'd like, any movie, any time for $3 as long as you present them with a valid student ID. Either way, you're getting one heck of a deal.

The rules are once again the same. You answer our questions, mail them to Insider Magazine's Film-Trivia Contest, c/o 214 West Hall, Bowling Green. Just slip it through the University's fabulous campus mail service and you're in business. Of course, if you prefer, you may hand deliver your entry blank to 210 West Hall and plop it in the blue Maxwell House coffee can on the Insider desk. Either way is fine. Just make sure you do it so you can have a chance at winning!

Hey folks, the semester's almost over and do we have a special treat for you this week. Today, Stephen King's novel The Dark Half makes its screen debut. Therefore, we thought it would only be appropriate to offer a quiz with nothing but questions about King and his movies.

Since 1976, over a dozen Stephen King novels and short stories have been made into films. Scenarios ranging from crazed automobiles to obsessive fans, from telekinetic high school outcasts to maniacal parent-killing children, have been scaring audiences out of their wits for almost two decades.

That is the inspiration for this contest which is inspired by Orion Pictures' Stephen King psychological thriller The Dark Half.

In one column below are the names of several famous actors and actresses who have appeared in films adapted from Stephen King stories. In the other column are the names of the movies in which they have appeared. Your task is to match them up and turn them in. Then, you have an excellent chance at winning TWO free movie passes! Let's get on with it. Good Luck!
